

The New Appointees Have The Same Old Wall Street Connections

Maybe Donald Trump should pick Hillary Clinton for Secretary of State?

Those choices Donald Trump is considering for the most important jobs seem to represent the same connections as did his defeated and disgraced opponent, party being the only real difference. Trump was fond of saying of Hillary, "lock her up", but some of his choices, including General David Petraeus, are deeply tarnished with a similar brush as Mrs. Clinton, and most come from the same banking and political power structure. Front runners for Hillary's bloody old job are said to be Rudy Giuliani, Gen. David Petraeus, and Mitt Romney, none of which are the new, clean, fresh faces we were expecting. Are they not all behold to Wall Street, every one? It only gets worse when we look at other choices for high office

According to Bloomberg news: "President-elect Donald Trump said Wednesday he plans to nominate former Goldman Sachs Group Inc partner Steven Mnuchin as the next U.S. Treasury Secretary." This key cabinet post has been in the hands of Goldman former officers through Democrat and Republican presidencies . According to Wall Street oracle, Bloomberg, Mnuchin carries plenty of tarnish and possible major league corruption that only Goldman Sacks alums seem to get away with. According to Bloomberg, Mnuchin, was involved with Burnie Madoff, but did not lose. He amazingly slipped out without a scratch, and there is much more! Mnuchin should not be within a mile of taxpayer's money, but he is to be Secretary of Treasury?

What happened to the new, fresh faces, including one very pretty one, a supporter of Bernie Sanders, Tulsi Gabbard, who was interview for Secretary of State and pronounced that her goal would be to avoiding more wars, at the top of her priorities. It seems we have heard no more of her. She knows about war, a veteran, a reserve military officer, a member of Congress who claims to have a real commitment to peace. Should that not be the job of the Secretary of state? Where is the commitment to peace of those front runners...I have yet to heard a word of it!

Maybe the revolt needs to be continued? Perhaps calling President Elect Trump and telling whomever answers the phone to bring on the new faces...Is that not what we voted for? Trump Executive Committee number is: 646-736-1779
